Introduction: The Jewish World in the Early First Century

The Political Landscape: Roman Occupation and Local Governance

By the time of Jesus, Judea was firmly under Roman control, a status that had been established since 63 BCE when the Roman general Pompey captured Jerusalem. The Roman presence was both overt and subtle, involving direct military rule and indirect governance through local client kings and aristocrats. Notably:

- Herod the Great (reigned 37-4 BCE): A Roman client king known for massive architectural projects, including rebuilding the Second Temple, but also notorious for political ruthlessness.
- Herod Antipas and other Herodian rulers: Tetrarchs responsible for various regions, often caught between Roman demands and local Jewish sensitivities.
- Roman Procurators: Following Herod's death, Roman governors, such as Pontius Pilate, assumed direct administrative control, often provoking tensions with the Jewish populace.

This political environment fostered a climate of unrest, with Jewish groups often resisting Roman authority, especially when it conflicted with their religious beliefs and national identity.

Religious Diversity and Societal Cohesion

Jewish society was not monolithic; it was characterized by diverse religious and ideological factions. Major groups included:

- Pharisees: Emphasized adherence to the Law (Torah) and oral traditions, influencing both religious practice and social norms.

This religious mosaic contributed to social tensions and debates about how to preserve Jewish identity under foreign rule.

- Pilgrimages during major festivals like Passover, Shavuot, and Sukkot.
- The role of the priesthood, especially the High Priest, as a central figure in religious authority.
- Ritual purity laws that regulated social interactions and participation in religious rites.

- Historical memories of Jewish independence and sovereignty.
- Prophecies from texts like Isaiah, Micah, and Daniel.
- Current suffering under Roman rule seen as a sign of divine punishment or the need for divine intervention.
- Apocalyptic ideas, which envisioned a future divine intervention to overthrow evil and establish God's kingdom.
